

Frumster Corner

I was not having any success using a matchmaker. However, through Frumster I had communicated with a number of members who shared outlooks similar to mine. Over a few day period of time I saw that Steve had been looking at my profile quite often and decided I would write to him!

We began emailing in August 2005, and soon after began speaking on the phone. During the months of September, November and March Steve came to visit me in Toronto - and I went to see him London during October, December and March.

I think the fact that this was a long distance relationship helped us build our communication skills and allowed us to really get to know one another at a deeper level.

The Frumster success stories encouraged both of us when we wondered if long-distance dating could work for us.

The most important thing people should learn from our story is to be willing to contact and correspond with people outside your geographical area. If you want it to work and are willing to put in the effort-it will!
